BIG AL CAPONE'S CELEBRATES FIVE YEARS IN 169-YEAR-OLD BUILDING

Big Al Capone's, present day.

Stage Coach Inn/Fuhrman Hotel, circa 1915.

Taima Kern | Action Reporter Media

Built in 1846, two years before Wisconsin achieved statehood, the former Stage Coach Inn and Fuhrman Hotel sits on the corner of Highway 151 and Count Trunk W in Pipe, as well as on the State Historical Registry, and presently houses two tenants, a pair of ghosts and one Big Al Capone's bar and restaurant.

Along the walls hang a wide variety of memorabilia, everything from an enlarged photo of Frank Sinatra's first mug shot to a collection of local historical photos of the Pipe/Malone area. In the back dining room, which was built in the 1950s, John has collected décor for a '50s theme.

Owned for the past five years by Annie and John Schmitz, former owners of Schmitt's Oar House, the building underwent only internal renovations, remaining recognizable when compared to a number of historical photos.

Capone's serves pizza, paninis, hand-pressed burgers, Friday night fish fry, pasta, sandwiches and boasts a full-service bar. It also offers a large back porch for the summer months, with a separate fully stocked bar.

John said he bought the building to "finish the project that others had started" after he sold Schmitt's. He said that the building had stood empty for too many years and he wanted to do something with it. The first floor houses the restaurant and bar, the second floor has two apartments and the office space for the restaurant, and the third floor, Annie says, is left for the ghost.

On most Saturdays, Big Al Capone's is graced by a variety of county and rock n' roll musical acts, performing with no cover charge. On Packers, Brewers and Badgers game days, the bar takes on a sports swing and entertains guests with the TVs turned on.

"People in the community still say that they see her and a little boy beside her in the windows when they're driving past at two or three in the morning," said Annie.

Big Al Capone's can also be rented for private parties.

Decorated with a definite gangster theme, a wax figure of Al Capone himself presides over a portion of the dining room and bar, seated beside half of a shot-up 1947 Chevy, representing the year he died. The former hotel is said to be one of Capone's stops on business trips between northern Wisconsin and Chicago.

For more information, you can visit Facebook.com/BigAlCapones or caponesofpipe.com. The restaurant and bar is located at N10302 Highway 151 in Malone (Pipe) and can be reached at (920) 795-4140.
